I wanted to try the experience with researchers, scientists, artists, outside a conference room, without electricity, without a computer, by installing a closer relationship between the participants in which the link goes through the language and the body. Trying the experience of sharing knowledge, of meaning as a freed commitment of power which, with any level whatsoever, is a poison. These meetings are part of a four -part project.

- A work of sculpture on the roofs which resonates the three places in Place Séraucourt: the Maison de la culture Malraux, the water tower and the new house of culture. The deer stands on the MC Malraux, the position of his body and his gaze indicate a direction. The doe, on the new MCB, seems to answer it and the sheep of Jacob, on the roof of the water tower, listens to them. All three are attentive.

We are witnessing an appearance that reacts to the nature of the sky, sunshine, which invites you to look up at the building and rediscover it. It's about moving your eyes.

- I remember a deer which, after slipping with steep terrain, found itself on the roof of a house below. This vision is at the origin of the project, perhaps also a premonition of the rising sea. We are witnessing here a dialogue between the three places "from the top": animal and symbolic presence on which will later arise the birds. "[...]
