Anna Malagrida – Trilogy

Brought together in a collector's box set, these three photographic books by Anna Malagrida offer a sensitive and engaged reading of the urban environment as a space of memory, resistance, and transformation.

Vitrines Created in Paris during the economic crisis, this series explores the boundary between photography and painting through shopfronts covered with whitewash, transformed into abstract surfaces that reflect the changing urban landscape.

Paris barricadé Following the Yellow Vests protests, Anna Malagrida and Mathieu Pernot photographed the boarded-up façades around the Étoile district. The wood, silence, and emptiness evoke a suspended social theatre, in contrast with the frenzy shown in the media.

Los Muros hablan A visual testimony to the Indignados movement in Spain, this series documents erased or fragmented slogans left on the walls of Madrid and Barcelona. A visual archaeology of a fleeting collective voice.
